Post Trade Report – July 2026

This report provides a summary of water allocation trade activities for the July 2026 Barmah and Goulburn-to-Murray trade opening events. It provides insight into the operation and outcomes of the trade opportunities under the Goulburn-to-Murray and Barmah Narrows trading rules.

The report is divided into two sections: the first section covers the Barmah trade opening, and the second part covers the Goulburn-to-Murray trade opening.

Application process summary

Allocation trade applications were submitted between 7:00 am and 2:00 pm on 2 July 2026. After the application window closed, eligible applications were randomised to determine the order in which they would be processed for the Goulburn-to-Murray and Barmah Narrows trade openings. DEECA and WaterNSW jointly undertook the randomisation of eligible Barmah Narrows applications. Both randomisation processes were independently observed by the Australian Competition and Consumer Commission (ACCC).

Victorian trade applications for the opening were submitted through My Water, DEECA's online platform for accessing the Victorian Water Register and trading water allocation. For the purposes of this report, Victorian application sources are reported as either Broker Portal (including Broker API connections) or Online Trading (all other registered My Water users).

The randomisation approach has been implemented as an interim solution to manage disruptions to trade openings. The approach reduces pressure on Victorian Water Register systems during trade openings and maintains the integrity of the trade application processing queue. Longer term options for improving the efficiency and equity of access to inter-valley trade opportunities are being considered under a joint project between DEECA and WaterNSW. DEECA has sought input from the public and industry stakeholders and will publish findings later in 2026. Information regarding the project is available on Engage Victoria.

Barmah trade opening – 2 July 2026

Barmah Narrows trade rule

The Barmah Narrows trade rule restricts downstream trade through the Barmah Narrows. The Barmah Narrows is a naturally narrow point on the River Murray, which restricts the river flow to just around 7,000 ML per day. Due to this flow restriction, a trade restriction is in place on downstream trade to protect delivery to existing entitlement holders and to maintain the river and riparian environment in and around the Narrows. The restriction means that trade downstream of the Barmah Narrows may only occur when there is sufficient matching trade capacity available in the opposite direction.

At the end of each water trading year on the 30th of June, under normal operations, the balance available for trading from above to below the Barmah Narrows is cleared. Then, at the beginning of next water year (1 July), a volume is credited to the Barmah trade balance. This annual adjustment account for water savings downstream of the Narrows which have been transferred to the Snowy scheme. This initial volume is available to be traded from above to below the Barmah Narrows. The Murray-Darling Basin Authority (MDBA) manages the limit as part of its role of managing the River Murray on behalf of New South Wales and Victoria under the Murray-Darling Basin Agreement.

Trade opening 2026–27

On 2 July 2026, the MDBA opened the Barmah trade limit with 24,121.3 ML of trade opportunity available. Read about the volume made available here.

Barmah trade application statistics

Key statistics

Barmah trade opportunity

- The total Barmah trade opportunity made available at 7:00 am 2 July was 24,121.3 ML.
- Victorian applications secured a volume of 8,884.2 ML, while NSW applications secured 15,218.2 ML.
- A total of 136 eligible applications were submitted in Victoria for a volume of 31,253.1 ML.
- A total of 78 eligible applications were submitted in NSW for a volume of 36,192.1 ML.
- Of these applications, Victoria approved 33, and NSW approved 29.
- In Victoria:
    - 138 applications were received, for a total volume of 31,477.8 ML.
    - 136 applications were eligible for randomisation, for a total volume of 31,253.1 ML.
        - 33 eligible applications were approved, with a volume of 8,884.2 ML.
        - 103 eligible applications were refused, with a volume of 22,386.9 ML.
    - 2 applications were not eligible for randomisation, for a volume of 224.7 ML – these were both refused.
    - 73 applications were received via the Broker Portal, for a total volume of 17,645.5 ML.
    - 65 applications were received via online trading, for a total volume of 13,832.3 ML.

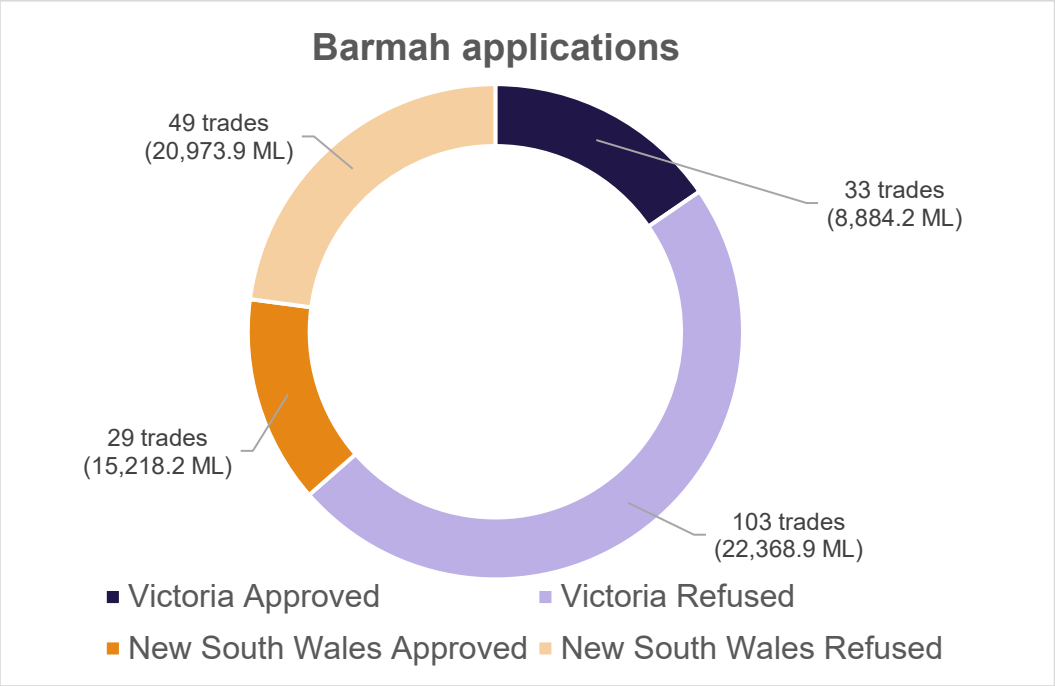

Trade application insights

Overview of Victorian and NSW applications

As in previous openings, the total volume of eligible applications received by Victoria and NSW (67,445.2 ML) significantly exceeded the available trade opportunity (24,121.3 ML), indicating continued strong market demand to move water allocation downstream through the Barmah Narrows.

Figure 1 shows the number and volume of all eligible Barmah applications received during the 2 July 2026 submission window. 214 eligible applications were received: Victoria approved 33 applications (8,884.2 ML), giving an approval rate of 24% by number of applications and 28% by volume. New South Wales approved 29 applications (15,218.2 ML), with a higher approval rate of 37% by number of applications and 42% by volume.

Detailed analysis of Victorian applications

The Victorian Water Register (VWR) classifies water owners into three types – Water Corporations, Environmental Water Holders, and 'Private' (for all remaining owners). This information can be used to provide a breakdown of trading activity by owner type.

Table 1 shows the seller and buyer owner type for eligible Victorian applications. Water corporation applications accounted for 6% of the eligible volume, they were approved because of their position in the randomised queue. Private parties made up the remaining 94% of trade volume. Victoria did not receive any applications from environmental parties for the Barmah trade opening.

Figure 2 shows all eligible Victorian Barmah applications received during the trade window broken down by application status and application source. More eligible Victorian applications were received through the broker portal (53%, 72 of 136), with the remainder submitted via online trading (47%, 64 of 136).

Table 2 shows the reasons for trade supplied on eligible Victorian applications. Related party trade (30,273.1 ML) accounted for the largest volume. 94% of approved trade applications were between private related parties (Figure 3). Definitions for the different reason for trade options can be found in this factsheet. Related party trade applications can include applications undertaken by water brokers to facilitate market transactions.

Range of applications

Victorian eligible application volumes for the Barmah trade opportunity ranged widely from 20.4 ML to 2,484.4 ML. The median volume of Victorian applications was 110 ML, and the average volume was 230 ML.

Figure 6 (see Appendix) displays all application volumes graphically, sorted from smallest to largest application by volume, and grouped by approved, refused, and those that were not eligible for randomisation.

There were a total of 63 unique seller allocation accounts and 48 unique buyer allocation accounts across the 136 Victorian eligible applications. There were 20 unique seller and 18 unique buyer allocation accounts across the 33 approved Victorian trade applications.

Goulburn-to-Murray trade opening – 2 July 2026

Goulburn-to-Murray trade rule

The Goulburn-to-Murray trade rule governs the trade of water allocations from the Goulburn, Broken, Campaspe and Loddon systems to the Victorian Murray system and interstate.

The rule helps to protect the health of the lower Goulburn River, by keeping trade opportunity in line with what can sustainably be delivered under the lower Goulburn operating rules. This means that traded water is delivered in a more sustainable, variable pattern, providing lower and more natural flows over summer and autumn. The trade rule continues to support water users by enabling the trade and movement of water, within limits that seek to improve river health over the long-term.

The trade rule allows for 240 GL of trade out, less legacy trade reserves, plus seasonal trade opportunity. New trade opportunity is made available through three specific announcements on 1 July, 15 October, and 15 December (or the next business day). Available seasonal trade opportunity is linked to real water use in the Murray River, allowing more flexibility to respond to seasonal conditions. Opportunity can also be released due to adjustments to legacy trade commitments.

Possible volumes for each trade opportunity are determined in accordance with the Trading Rules for Declared Water Systems. You can read in more detail about the trade rule at the VWR website and you can read worked examples of how the trade opportunity is calculated, for dry, average and wet years.

Trade opening 2026–27

July 2026

On 2 July 2026, the Goulburn-to-Murray trade limit opened with 112,827.9 ML of trade opportunity available. Read about the volume made available in July at the VWR website news.

Goulburn-to-Murray trade application statistics

Key statistics

Goulburn-to-Murray trade opportunity

- The total Goulburn-to-Murray trade opportunity made available at 7:00 am 2 July 2026 was 112,827.9 ML
- 290 allocation trade applications were received, for a total volume of 120,869.9 ML
    - 286 applications were eligible for randomisation, for a total volume of 119,285.3 ML
        - 282 eligible applications were approved, with a volume of 112,555.3 ML
        - 4 eligible applications were refused, with a volume of 6,730 ML
    - 4 applications were not eligible for randomisation, for a volume of 1,584.6 ML – these were all refused
- 154 trade applications were received via the broker portal, for a total volume of 45,733.4 ML
- 135 trade applications were received via online trading, for a total volume of 75,133.5 ML
- No tagged use occurred

There was 272.6 ML of trade opportunity remaining after the July 2026 Goulburn-to-Murray trade opening. This remaining volume was fully taken up by further allocation applications on 3 July 2026.

Trade application insights

As in previous openings, the total volume of applications received (120,869.9 ML) exceeded the available trade opportunity (112,827.9 ML), indicating ongoing demand to move water allocation from the Goulburn system to the Murray system. The extent of oversubscription was lower than observed in many previous openings, demonstrating less intense competition for the available trade opportunity.

The Victorian Water Register classifies water owners into three types – Water Corporations, Environmental Water Holders, and 'Private' (for all remaining owners). This information can be used to provide a breakdown of trading activity by owner type.

Table 3 shows the seller and buyer owner type on eligible applications. Water corporation applications accounted for 7.5% of the eligible volume. Environmental applications accounted for 16.8% of the eligible volume, with private parties making up the remaining 75.7%.

5 eligible environmental trade applications were submitted; of these 4 were approved for 16,000 ML. Water corporations submitted 3 eligible applications during the submission window, of these 3 were approved for 9,000 ML.

Allocation held by environmental water holders has the same attributes, including being subject to the same trading rules, as allocation held by irrigators and other market participants. Like many large water owners and market participants, environmental water holders hold a portfolio of entitlements across the Murray Darling Basin which they manage for use at different locations. Environmental water holders typically publish their upcoming trade intentions on their webpages: The Victorian Environmental Water Holder's trading strategy is available here and the Commonwealth Environmental Water Holder's is available here.

Figure 4 shows all eligible Goulburn-to-Murray applications received during the trade window broken down by application status and application source. In July 2026, a slightly lower number of eligible applications were received through online trading (47%, 135 of 286), with the remainder submitted via the Broker Portal (53%, 151 of 286).

Table 4 shows the reasons for trade supplied on eligible applications. Related party trade (94,105.5 ML) remains the dominant reason for trade and accounted for the largest volume. Definitions for the different reason for trade options can be found in this factsheet. Related party trades can include trades undertaken by intermediaries such as water brokers to facilitate market transactions.

Figure 5 shows the volume and number of approved trades by buyer/seller type and reason for trade. Note that there were no trades between different party types (e.g. private to environment). Private related party trades make up 91% of all approved trades by number and 73% by volume. In contrast, private standard commercial trades make up only 2% by number and 1% by volume. Related party trades can give effect to subsequent market transactions, particularly between water brokers and their clients.

Range of applications

The eligible application volumes for the Goulburn-to-Murray trade opportunity ranged widely from 1 ML to 4,000 ML. The median application volume was 209 ML, and the average application volume was 417 ML.

Figure 7 (see Appendix) displays all application volumes graphically, sorted from smallest to largest application by volume, and grouped by approved, refused, and those that were not eligible for randomisation.

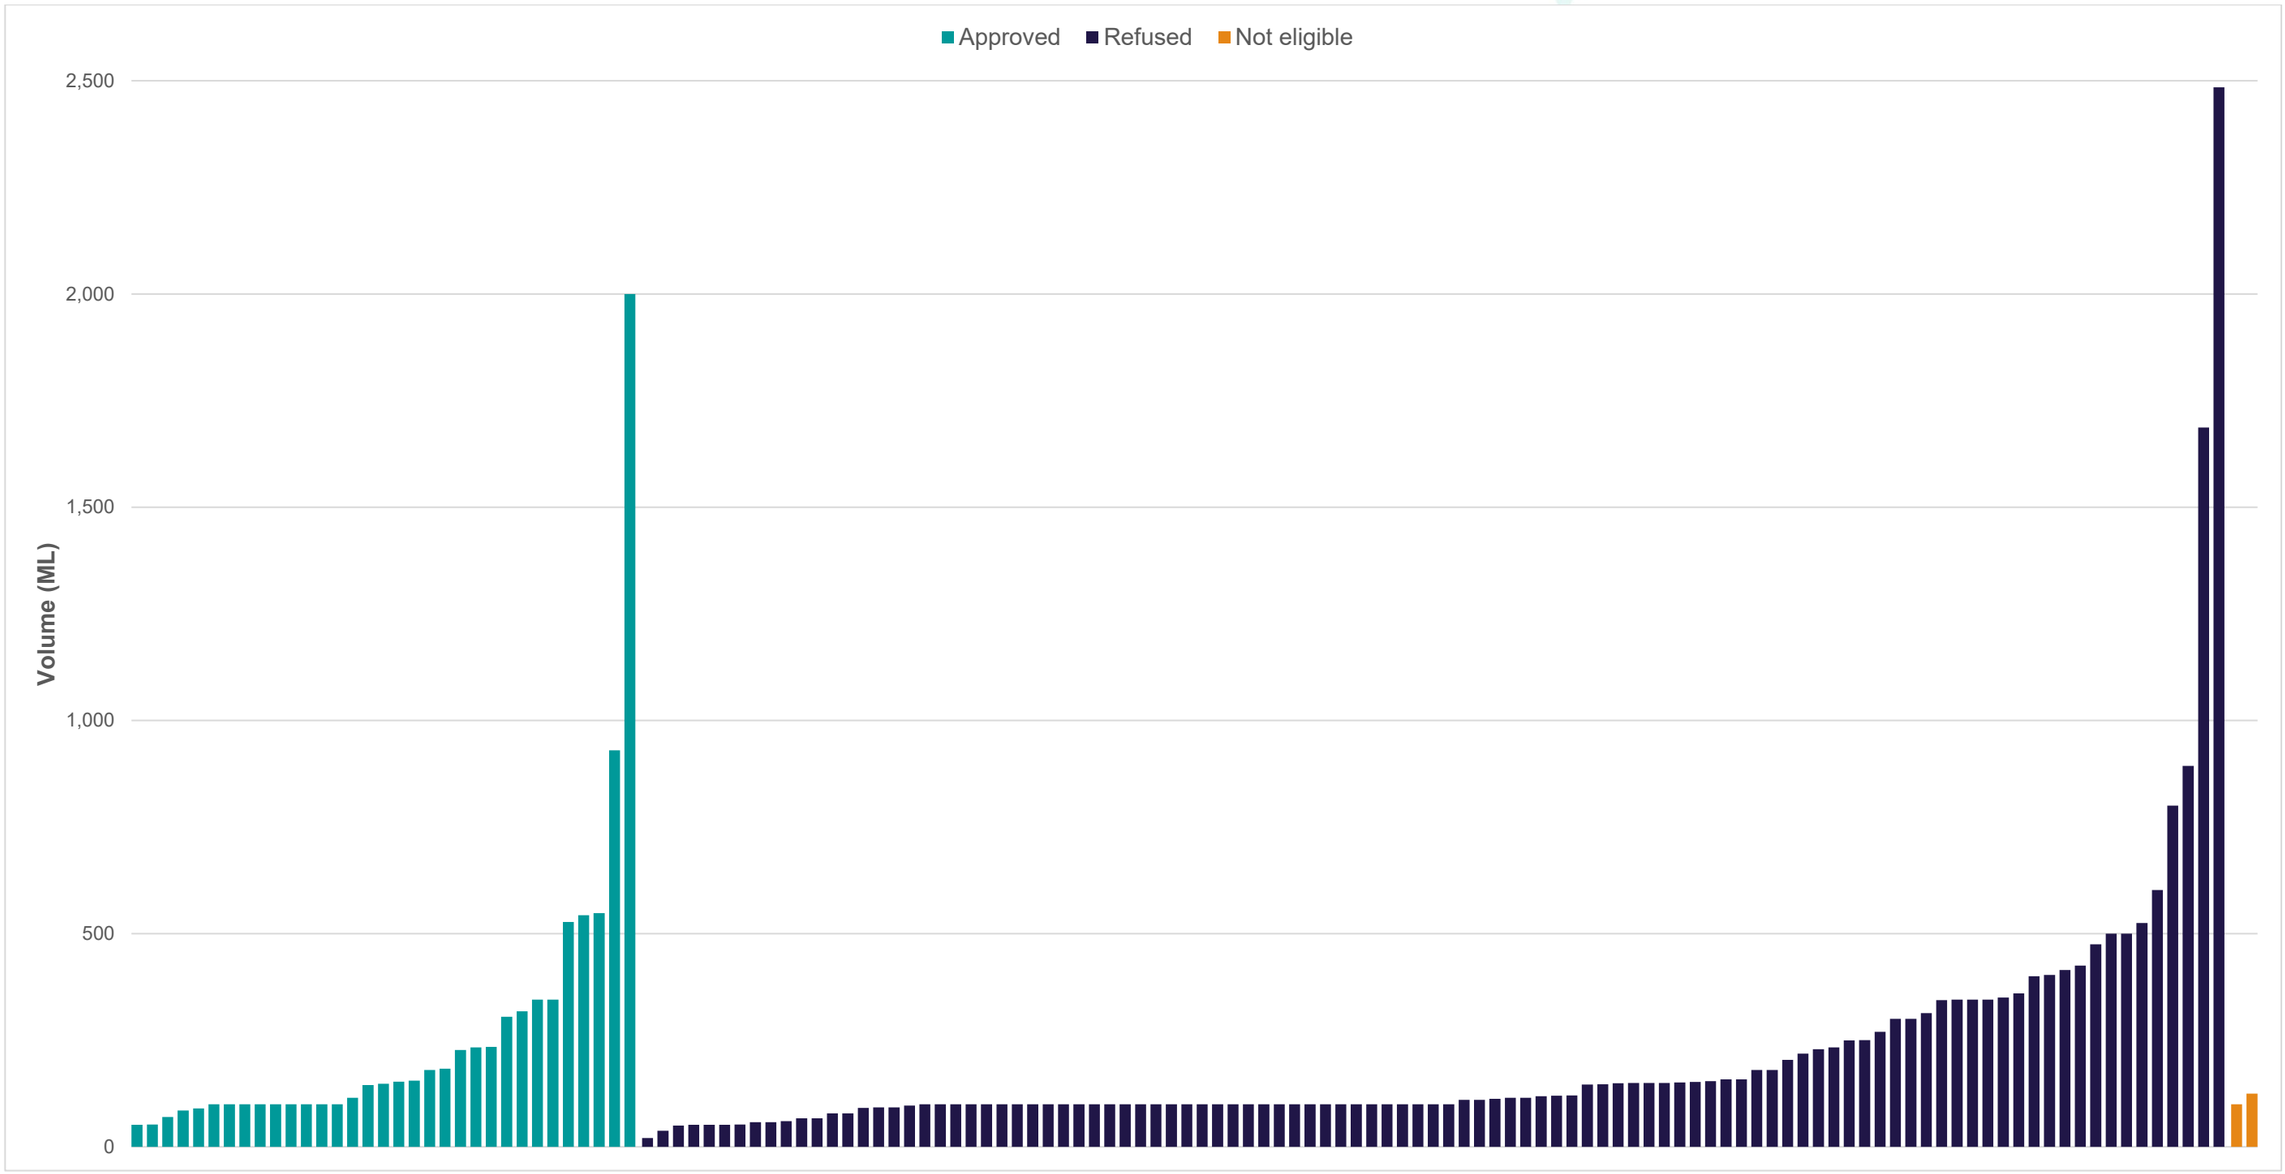

There were a total of 115 unique seller allocation accounts and 82 unique buyer allocation accounts across the 286 applications. There were 114 unique seller and 81 unique buyer allocation accounts across the 282 approved applications.

Notes:

1. This table includes all Barmah trade opening applications received in Victoria and NSW on 2 July 2026. Victoria does not have any information about not eligible applications received by NSW.
2. Each Victorian Barmah trade application was assigned a “Unique Identifier” according to the order they were received by the register to facilitate a de-identified randomisation procedure. NSW independently assigned each of their applications a unique identifier.
3. Trade applications can be refused for reasons including the account not having enough tradable allocation, or because the trade volume would exceed the available trade opportunity for the trade rule.
4. The Victorian Water Register classifies allocation account ownership into three types of entities – Water Corporations, Environmental Water Holders, and ‘Private’ (for all remaining accounts).
5. Applications can be submitted to the Victorian Water register online in My Water, these can be either online trading by register users or from the broker portal (including the broker API). Customers may also submit a form directly to water corporations.
6. Applications received between 7:00 am and 2:00 pm on 2 July were manually processed by water corporations on 3 July.
7. At the end of processing Barmah applications on 3 July, there was a remaining balance of 18.9 ML.
8. There were 2 applications not eligible for the randomisation process either due to insufficient allocation account balance at the time of lodgement, or because the trade was a “trade remaining balance” application.

Notes:

1. This table includes all Goulburn-to-Murray trade applications submitted between 7:00 am and 2:00 pm on 2 July 2026 for the Goulburn-to-Murray trade opening. Eligible applications are displayed in the randomised processing order.
2. Trade applications can be refused for reasons including the account not having enough tradable allocation, or because the trade volume would exceed the available trade opportunity for the trade rule at the time of processing.
3. The Victorian Water Register classifies allocation account ownership into three types of entities – Water Corporations, Environmental Water Holders, and 'Private' (for all remaining accounts).
4. Applications can be submitted to the Victorian Water register online in My Water, these can be either online trading by register users or from the broker portal (including the broker API). Customers may also submit a form directly to water corporations.
5. On 2 July, the Goulburn-to-Murray trade limit opened with a total of 112,827.9 ML of trade opportunity.
6. Applications received between 7:00 am and 2:00 pm on 2 July were processed on 3 July.
7. At the end of processing Goulburn-to-Murray applications on 3 July, there was a remaining balance of 272.6 ML which was then taken up by further allocation applications after the Register re-opened.
8. There were 4 applications not eligible for the randomisation process either due to insufficient allocation account balance at the time of lodgement, or because the trade was a "trade remaining balance" application
